About the cover: This architect's rendering of the Delaware Public Archives facility, under construction in Dover as this special issue of the American Archivist went to print, illustrates one of the highlighted themes in this issue: the development and construction of new state archives facilities. Howard P. Lowell's article places the new building in the context of the development of Delaware's programs to meet the archival and records management needs of the twenty-first century. Rendering provided by Moeckel Carbonell Associates Inc., Architects of the Delaware Public Archives facility.
